Disability Discrimination Advice Project

Choices and Rights Disability Coalition

AN ORGANISATION OF DISABLED PEOPLE

- Are you a disabled person or do you have a long term health condition?

OR

- Are you a carer for someone (adult or child) who is disabled or who has a long term health condition?

Have you recently or are you currently experiencing discrimination because of your disability or that of the disabled adult or child you care for?

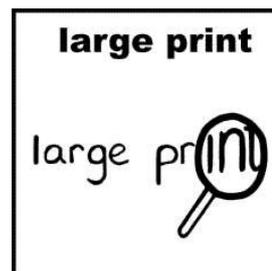

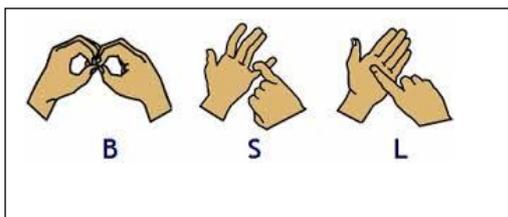

Under the Equality Act 2010 you have rights

- Not to be refused a service or given a worse service because of your disability or because of your association with a disabled person
- Not be harrassed because of your disability or because of your association with a disabled person
- To reasonable adjustments to help you access a service, in work and in education. This could include providing equipment, or additional support, or making other changes which would enable you to take part in education, employment or everyday services.

For example :-

Communication support e.g BSL, induction loops, written information

Accessible information e.g Large print, disc or email

Fed up with it? Want to do something about it? We can help!

These are some of the cases in which we have successfully helped disabled people challenge discrimination

- Denial of access to a pub, shop or restaurant because a disabled person has a registered assistance dog.
- Failure to provide information in an accessible format e.g. large print, email or disc for people unable to access standard print.
- Failure to provide communication support for deaf people e.g. at hospital appointments
- Being unable to use a blue badge parking space because cars without blue badges are in them.
- Employment related discrimination – being refused an interview or a job because of your disability, failure to provide “reasonable adjustments” to enable you to continue working or the threat of or actual dismissal due to disability.
- Discrimination in education - disabled children, their parents and adult learners

We are always happy for you to get in contact and we can advise you if you have a case and support you in taking up your rights and challenging discrimination.
